

An engraving depicting a classical scene. In the foreground, a woman in a long, draped dress stands and gestures towards a seated figure. To the right, a group of figures are engaged in musical activities, with one playing a trumpet and another a lute. The background features classical architecture, including columns and a pedimented structure. The overall style is detailed and characteristic of 18th-century engraving.

The Making of the Humanities

First International Conference on the History of the Humanities

*23-25 October 2008
University of Amsterdam*

Program
and Abstracts